

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

During the formation of a metallization layer of a semiconductor device, a cap layer is formed above a metal line and subsequently an implantation process is performed so as to modify the metal in the vicinity of the interface between the cap layer and the metal line.
5 Consequently, an improved behavior in view of electromigration of the metal line may be obtained, thereby increasing device reliability.